Venue

The conference will be held at the faculty of humanities of the University of Girona. It is located next to the middle ages city wall, at the old town of Girona, in the former XIII century gothic convent of Sant Domènec.

Travel

Girona is easily accessible, being located just 1.5 hours by train from Barcelona El Prat Airport. Girona also has its own international airport, which receives direct flights from many airports in Europe. Girona high-speed railway station is in the middle of the line Barcelona-France with international high-speed services operated by Renfe and SNCF. A variety of hotels are available nearby the conference venue, in the city centre.

Instructions for Authors

Prospective authors are invited to submit a one page abstract by 17 January 2019 using the online system at the conference website:

composites2019.udg.edu

Full papers (max. 12 pages) for accepted abstracts will be due by 27 June 2019. For templates and further information, please visit the conference website.
